

Relationships and Trust in Collaborative Practice Groups

Dear Catherine,

The IACP Practice Group Phone Bridge Series is designed to help Collaborative Practitioners share information and ask questions about timely topics. This session's topic is Relationships and Trust in Collaborative Practice Groups.

Join two experienced Collaborative practitioners in a discussion of this crucial issue:

- Cathy Heenan is a psychologist, Collaborative Divorce Coach, Board Member of the Massachusetts Collaborative Law Council and a Trainer for Collaborative Professionals both nationally and internationally. She is an expert in the field of adult learning, co-author of the book "Preparing, Designing and Leading Workshops: A Humanistic Approach" and a consultant to organizations facilitating teams to build strong and effective interpersonal relationships.
- Dr. Susan Gamache is a psychologist, Marriage and Family Therapist, and mediator. She is also a Collaborative Divorce Coach, Child Specialist, and award-winning Collaborative Trainer. She is original co-chair of the Vancouver Collaborative Separation and Divorce Group and former IACP board member.

Cathy and Susan will lead a discussion concerning the importance of building strong working relationships between Collaborative colleagues and strategies for maintaining trust, despite the challenges of collaborative work.

Register Now to ensure your place in the upcoming phone bridge:

Date: Monday, April 5, 2010, 4:00 p.m. Eastern Time (to verify this time in your time zone, we recommend using the World Clock: www.timeanddate.com/worldclock/)

Topic: Relationships and Trust in Collaborative Practice Groups

Facilitated by: Cathy Heenan, cheenan@comcast.net, and Susan Gamache, gamache@interchange.ubc.ca

We want to encourage you, as a Practice Group Leader, to attend, and we are able to accommodate only 75 participants. We are holding space for Practice Group Leaders until Monday, March 15, 2010. If space remains available after that date, attendance at the phone bridge will be made available to all IACP members.

To register, contact Colleen Hughes at colleen@collaborativepractice.com.

Confirmations and call-in information will be sent in advance of the seminar.

Best Regards,

Practice Group Development Committee
